BAGRAM, Afghanistan – For Jamshid, a scholarly Afghan 7th grade student, Jan. 6 was a big day – Americans were coming along with the provincial police chief and other government officials.

To the adolescent fell the imposing task of addressing the visitors on behalf of his school and orphanage located in the mountain town of Gulbahar in Kapisa Province.

“I am really thankful for you guys coming,” said Jamshid, thankful for the humanitarian aid delivered by the Parwan Provincial Reconstruction Team.

The team delivered boxes of school supplies,

Reconnaissance mission to bring ANA to Faryab

FARYAB PROVINCE, Afghanistan – The Afghan National Army took a step closer to building its Army’s strength with a reconnaissance mission Jan. 4 in the province of Faryab.

The reconnaissance mission conducted by the Office of Military Cooperation-Afghanistan’s U.S. Recruiting Assistance Team was an attempt to select a prominent site and the secure land to build an ANA Volunteer Center in the province.

“Today, we are here to bring Afghanistan closer to its desire to be an independent nation,” said Lt. Col. David Francavilla, director of U.S. Recruiting Assistance Team. “Today, we are here to start the process of building an ANAVC.”

During the mission the recruiting team, in tow with an Afghanistan Ministry of Defense representative and a representative from the British Army, met with Enayatullah Enayat, governor of Faryab, and more than 45 elders, dignitaries and local press members to discuss the benefits of the ANA and impact the volunteer center would have on the province.

“(Afghanistan) fought 23 years in a civil war, fought the Soviet’s, then fought the Taliban and as a result it left the country in poor condition,” said Francavilla, “but we are here to help. The world has seen the suffering of Afghanistan and nations from all over want to help. We know that what happens here affects the entire world.”

In the three-hour-long visit the recruiting team explained the benefits Afghan men would gain by joining the ANA. Benefits such as complete medical care, 30 days paid vacation per year, civilian sector related job skills training, advanced education opportunities and a pay of $3,600 Afghani per month ($70) were all enticing factors for joining the ANA said Francavilla; however, he said the most enticing factor for joining is service to one’s country.

“The biggest thing a man can do is serve his country,” said Francavilla. “When a man serves his country he knows that he is not

Powell said the Saddam Hussein regime "was a danger we had to worry about."

Powell on WMD existence: 'This game is still unfolding'

WASHINGTON – Secretary of State Colin Powell Thursday defended the Bush administration's position that Iraq had weapons of mass destruction programs and defended his speech on the matter to the United Nations last February.

"This game is still unfolding," he told reporters.

He was responding to a study that found Iraq had ended its programs by the mid-1990s and did not pose an immediate threat to the United States before the 2003 war. Powell said he had not read the report but read news reports about it.

The study, released Thursday, was conducted by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, a nonpartisan, respected group that opposed the war in Iraq.

The United States used the threat of Iraqi weapons of mass destruction as a justification for launching the war against the regime of Saddam Hussein, according to the report.

The report follows a nine-month search in Iraq for WMD – nuclear, biological and chemical – the key reason the administration cited in its decision to invade Iraq.

"We looked at the intelligence assessment process, and we've come to the conclusion that it is broken," author Joseph Cirincione said Thursday on CNN's "American Morning."

"It is very likely that intelligence officials were pressured by senior administration officials to conform their threat assessments to pre-existing policies."

But Powell noted that Iraq used chemical weapons in the Iraq-Iran war and on the Kurds in the 1980s and had the chance to come clean about its programs to the international community through the '90s.

One of the girls abducted smiles from inside an ambulance after the capture of suspect Jerry William Jones.

Three abducted girls safe

CALHOUN, Ga. – The man sought by the FBI in the abduction of three girls and charged with killing four people apparently shot himself while being pursued Thursday evening, police said.

Georgia Bureau of Investigation spokesman John Bankhead said Jerry William Jones is in serious condition but the three girls are safe following an accident on Interstate 75 just north of the Tennessee state line.

"The kids apparently are fine," Bankhead told CNN. "He apparently is in bad condition."

Officials said it appears Jones shot himself after he crashed while attempting to exit the interstate.

Jones was pursued by officials from several agencies and crashed just after crossing the border at East Ridge, Tennessee.

He has been taken into custody, officials said.

Gordon County Sheriff Jerry Davis said Jones is charged with killing the parents and sister of his estranged common-law wife along with his 10-month-old daughter.

Jones called his wife to tell her about the killings and warned her he would hurt the surviving girls if she reported the crimes, Davis said.

Bankhead said investigators are "elated" over the news of Jones' capture.

The state game department and National Park Service set up the Dixie Emporium sporting goods store to infiltrate the black market.

Trap snares bear smugglers

RICHMOND, Va. – More than 100 people have been charged in the illegal trafficking of black bear parts following a sting operation in which authorities set up a sporting goods store as a front to peddle the items poached in Virginia.

Agents found that whole bears, gall bladders, paws and other parts were trafficked to Washington, D.C., Maryland, West Virginia, North Carolina, New Jersey, New York, and California, as well as overseas, primarily to South Korea.

Each gall bladder alone can fetch up to $3,000 on the black market. The organs are believed in some Asian cultures to treat a variety of ailments, including high blood pressure, impotence and rheumatism.

"We've learned over the years what the impact of commercialization is. The temptation is to overharvest," said Col. Herb Foster of Virginia's Department of Game and Inland Fisheries. "Wildlife species generally can't sustain a commercial market."

In the sting, the state game department and the National Park Service set up a sporting-goods store to infiltrate the commercial black market, with agents selling bears and wild American ginseng roots. The operation used fliers and other advertisements to lure buyers.

The three-year operation stemmed from previous investigations that uncovered extensive poaching and trade in black bear parts that originated in Virginia, including Shenandoah National Park.

clothes, candy and toys collected from donations from the U.S. to the two orphanages.

Another important delivery to the orphanages was the message that the Afghan government and the U.S. military has the orphans' interests in their hearts and will not forget them, according to Maj. Carman Oldre, Parwan PRT Civil Affairs Team commander.

"I can tell by your hard work and the smiles on your faces ... that Afghanistan has a very bright future," said Oldre as she addressed the children.

Other members of the team also expressed their support for the humanitarian aid program. "I think humanitarian aid is a good way to support Afghanistan," said Capt. Kim In Soo, one of the Republic of Korea Army Soldiers on the Parwan PRT.

According to Gul Agha, the principal for one of the orphanages, the supplies were very much appreciated by both the teachers and children. He said that the supplies and clothes were needed and will be put to good use during the school year.

Kim said the humanitarian aid program is best used on orphanages and other places where the need is great but resources are limited.

"Sometimes the Afghans just expect something for free when they see U.S. or Korean soldiers," he said. "Orphanages and other places that need welfare are where (humanitarian aid) should go."

With the supplies going to the right place, Kim said the distribution went off without a hitch.

"It went very smooth," he said. "Sometimes we have difficulty and the distribution is a mess, but today it was good."

The children were so well behaved that the PRT members even had a chance to play with the kids.

At one orphanage, Oldre took time to teach all the children how to play the American games of "Simon Says" and "Duck, Duck, Goose" while the children taught the PRT soldiers how to play the Afghan game of "The Wolf and Sheep."

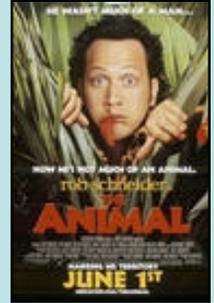

Although the visit with the Soldiers and government officials was short, Jamshid will now have plenty of pens and paper to write any speeches for future visits from the Afghan government or U.S. military.

only protecting the country today, but also protecting its future.”

An ANAVC prototype was also displayed during the visit, in which, the recruiting team gave the blueprint for the building was given to local contractors in a construction packet for viewing.

“The impact of the ANA doesn’t only benefit this city by the way of service to its country, it benefits the city financially because we hire a local contractor to build the ANAVC,” said Maj. Steven Nixon, deputy director of the U.S. Recruiting Assistance Team.

The ANAVC is equipped with a full-service kitchen, three-space office component, a living room, a 25-Soldier living quarters, and showers and bathrooms.

“We appreciate all that the U.S. and the world is doing for Afghanistan,” said Enayat. “We understand that without security we can do nothing as a country, so the ANA is the only hope for a bright future.”

Enayat noted that he fully supposes the quest to bring an ANA to Faryab and that the recruiting assistance team has his full support.

The governor showed the recruiting team two sites that would be available for the ANAVC.

A meeting is scheduled later in the month to sign a deed for the land acquisition and at that time a contract conference will be hosted to award the project to a contractor.

The project is estimated to take 70 days to build.

“People will know that the ANA is the future and that America and the world’s intent is the same as ours – to make Afghanistan a better place,” said Col. Abdullah Jakfer, Faryab ANA recruiting commander as he spoke about the ANAVC efforts in Faryab.

Along with selecting the two sites, the U.S. Recruiting Assistance Team purchased a month of radio airtime, in which, Jakfer will advertise the ANA for a half hour a day.

In discussing the message that the recruiting team wants to illustrate, Francavilla and Nixon both agreed that the message must be honest, sincere and candid.

“Joining the ANA is a voluntary service, so we have to be honest in our approach,” said Nixon as he spoke with Jakfer. “We want (Afghan citizens) to know that they aren’t giving up a son to the ANA, they’re investing in his future and in Afghanistan’s future.”

New relief act provisions protect service members

Story by Sgt. 1st Class Doug Sample
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON – A new law replacing the Soldiers’ and Sailors’ Civil Relief Act of 1940 will provide military personnel – especially those deployed or called to active duty – greater protections to handle their personal financial and legal obligations, Defense Department officials said here.

President Bush signed the Service Members’ Civil Relief Act into law Dec. 19.

“The focus of the SCRA is the same as under the SSCRA: to provide protections to service members who have difficulty meeting their personal financial and legal obligations because of their military service,” said Air Force Lt. Col. Patrick Lindemann, deputy director for legal policy in DoD’s Office of the Undersecretary of Defense for Personnel and Readiness (<http://www.dod.mil/prhome/>).

“The SCRA is a significant law, because it clarifies and updates the provisions that existed in the SSCRA, while adding some additional protections,” he said.

“Service members on long-term deployments or called to active duty should not have to worry about their families in their absence being evicted from their quarters without sufficient legal protections,” he continued, “or that they are paying on a leased car or apartment that they can’t use, or about civil legal proceedings they can’t attend because of their deployment.

“These are some of the situations the SCRA covers so that service members are able to devote their energies to the military mission and the defense needs of the nation, and not on civil matters waiting for them at home,” he added.

What Lindemann called “a significant change” added in the SCRA is an automatic 90-day stay of civil proceedings upon application by the service member. This applies to all judicial and administrative hearings. In the past, according to Lindemann, stays were discretionary with the courts.

The SCRA also makes it clear that the 6 percent limitation on interest rates for pre-service debts requires a reduction in monthly payments, and that any interest in excess of 6 percent is forgiven, not deferred, Lindemann said.

The SCRA also expanded the protection against eviction. Under the SSCRA, service members and their dependents who entered into a lease for $1,200 or less could not be evicted without a court order. The SCRA increased that maximum lease amount to $2,400 and added an annual adjustment for inflation. For 2004, the maximum will be $2,465.

Lindemann said this will significantly increase the number of service members entitled to this protection.

The SCRA also gives the service member who has received permanent-change-of-station orders or who is being deployed for not less than 90 days the right to terminate a housing lease with 30 days’ written notice. Prior to the SCRA, service members could be required to pay for housing they were unable to occupy.

One of the more significant provisions in the SCRA that did not exist in the SSCRA, Lindemann said, was an added protection for service members who have motor vehicle leases. Any active duty service member who has received PCS orders outside the continental United States, or who is being deployed for not less than 180 days, may terminate a motor vehicle lease. The law prohibits early termination charges. “Now, service members won’t have to pay monthly lease payments for a car they can’t use,” said Lindemann.

“Service members may not always realize all the protections they have under the law,” Lindemann said. “If service members have questions about the SCRA or the protections that they may be entitled to, they should contact their unit judge advocate or installation legal assistance officer for further assistance.”

Joe Gibbs was working the crowd like a politician Thursday.

Redskins give Gibbs royal treatment

ASHBURN, Va. – Joe Gibbs was given an unprecedented welcome to the Washington Redskins on Thursday, greeted by cheers and the blare of a horn as he emerged from a five-limousine parade.

Gibbs shook hands while walking down a path lined with orange cones and barricades. One fan held a white sign that read: “Joe Gibbs = God, Mr. Snyder = Genius, Being A Redskins Skins Priceless.”

“Bring it back to D.C., coach,” yelled one fan. “Bring it back.”

Gibbs shook hands with fans saying over and over again, “Good to see you.”

Gibbs returned after an 11-year absence, a stunning development and a much-needed lift for a franchise that has been to the playoffs only once since he left after the 1992 season.

The Hall of Fame coach agreed to a five-year deal and was given the title of team president. He will have great influence on player decisions, but Snyder holds the final word on all matters.

All-Star Vaughn out for 2004 season

Three-time All-Star Mo Vaughn was limited to 27 games last season.

NEW YORK – Mo Vaughn will not play baseball in 2004 and is doubtful for 2005 because of an arthritic left knee.

The injured New York Mets first baseman went on the disabled list May 3 with joint and cartilage damage in his knee and didn’t play again last season.

Vaughn hoped to go to spring training, but after working all winter he had been advised not to try a comeback, the 36-year-old said in a conference call Thursday.

“From what the doctors say, it would be tough this season and it’s not very bright for years to come,” Vaughn said. “It doesn’t look good at all. It’s a bad situation.”

Vaughn said he works out two hours a day, four days a week. “I don’t want to put so much stress that I need a knee replacement at 40 and the another one at 60,” he said.

“I worked hard this offseason trying to put strength in the knee. An athlete knows his body. You know pain. You feel it in your bones. You’ve got to get up, get on with life and keep moving.”

Vaughn is owed $15 million for 2004, the final year of an $80 million contract he signed in 1999. The Mets have a $14 million option with a $2 million buyout in 2005. Insurance on the deal will reimburse the team for 75 percent of the contract once he misses 90 days.

Shaq out another week with injury

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. – An MRI taken on Shaquille O’Neal’s strained right calf revealed no serious damage Thursday, but the Los Angeles Lakers’ star will miss at least two more games.

“The MRI confirmed a strained calf muscle and showed significant swelling, but no other damage,” Lakers spokesman John Black said. “He will definitely miss the next two games. Beyond that, we don’t want to speculate on a return date.”

O’Neal will sit out Friday night’s game against Atlanta and Monday night’s game against Cleveland, both at Staples Center.

After that, the Lakers host Cleveland on Wednesday night, play at Sacramento on Jan. 16, and face the Clippers the following night.

O’Neal was injured in the second quarter of last Friday night’s game at Seattle. The Lakers lost that game as well as the three that followed, giving them their second four-game losing streak in Phil Jackson’s four-plus seasons as coach.

“All right, getting better,” O’Neal told reporters Thursday before leaving for the MRI.

Afghan troops hurt in Kandahar attack

KANDAHAR, Afghanistan (AP) – Two Afghan Soldiers were wounded by a bomb Thursday just yards from the spot where a double blast killed 15 children earlier this week, officials said.

The bomb exploded on the roof of a building at the edge of a sprawling military compound in eastern Kandahar where the men were on guard duty.

One of the Soldiers had to have his leg amputated. The other was only slightly injured.

Violence has overshadowed Sunday's ratification of a new Afghan constitution that is supposed to act as a bulwark against terrorism and underlined the lack of security that threatens plans for national elections.

On Tuesday, 12 Hazara men were killed on a road in southern Helmand province Tuesday in an apparent act of ethnic violence.

"This comes at a time when we are taking some positive steps toward reconstruction," President Hamid Karzai said in a statement condemning the shootings. "The enemies of our country are trying to show that security is not good enough."

Interior Minister Ali Ahmad Jalali said there had been ethnic tensions in the area, where most of the population are Pashtuns.

"Maybe it is the work of terrorists trying to create problems among the different ethnic groups," he said.

Thursday's blast in Kandahar occurred about 300 feet from the spot where a bomb concealed in an apple cart Tuesday tore through a group of children.

The injured Soldiers' commanding officer, Faiz Mohammed, blamed Taliban militants.

Another bomb was defused in Kandahar on Wednesday evening, deputy police chief Salim Khan said. It was found hidden under straw near a downtown bus station, he said.

Police said they arrested six people Thursday and that they had confessed to planting the bomb at the bus station. Documents found in their possession indicated they had links to the Taliban, Khan said.

Pakistan launches anti-terrorist plan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) – Pakistan's army launched a major offensive against suspected terrorists in a mountainous region near the border with Afghanistan believed used by al Qaeda fugitives, senior officials told The Associated Press on Thursday.

It was not clear whether any major arrests were made during the operation, said Information Minister Sheikh Rashid Ahmed. He said more information would be provided throughout the day.

Gen. Shaukat Sultan, the army spokesman, told AP that the operation near Wana, the headquarters of the deeply conservative South Waziristan tribal region, was continuing.

"We don't yet have details about casualties or arrests," he said.

An intelligence official told AP that authorities had received word three days ago that a group of armed men, believed to be foreigners, were in an area called Azam Warsak, near Wana. Tribal elders were contacted and asked the men to surrender, but they refused, prompting the military action.

Troops stormed the compound where the men are believed to be holed up at 3 a.m. Thursday, the official said on condition of anonymity. He said there had been an exchange of fire and that several army helicopters were involved. Soldiers used loudspeakers to urge villagers to leave the area.

South Waziristan is one of the main suspected hideouts for Osama bin Laden and other top al Qaeda fugitives. Officials in the region have said American planes dropped leaflets in the area Wednesday asking residents to cooperate with authorities and turn in any foreign terrorist suspects.

The area is just across the border from the Afghan province of Paktika, one of the main areas of Taliban resistance to U.S. military presence. The ousted militia has staged several ambushes and frequently launches rockets at U.S. military bases in the area, with fighters retreating across the border into Pakistan after the attacks.

Afghan and U.S. officials have long complained that Pakistan does not do enough to prevent Taliban and al Qaeda men from using its territory as a safe haven. Pakistan has said it is doing all it can to seal the porous border.
